2017-2020

An Taoiseach and Minister for Defence

In my role as Taoiseach and Minister for Defence I welcome the publication of this Strategy Statement which provides a strategic framework for the Department of Defence and the Defence Forces over the coming three year period. As with the previous Strategy Statement, a key focus must be to ensure that the Defence Organisation retains the capacity to meet its High Level Goal and to fulfil all roles assigned by Government. The White Paper on Defence continues to provide the Defence policy framework out to 2025 and has informed many of the strategic goals, objectives and actions identified in this Strategy Statement. Finally, I would like to acknowledge the hard work and effort of all personnel within the Department of Defence and the Defence Forces and I look forward to their continued demonstration of the highest standards of Public Service.

Leo Varadkar T.D.
An Taoiseach and Minister for Defence

Minister with Responsibility for Defence

This Strategy Statement covering the period 2017 to 2020 sets out the High Level Goal of the Department of Defence and the Defence Forces and seeks to continue the positive work that has been undertaken following publication of the White Paper on Defence. The White Paper has set out a comprehensive policy framework for the period to 2025 and along with the Programme for a Partnership Government has been a key factor in the identification of priorities over the next three years. This Strategy Statement also builds on the significant progress already made on White Paper implementation and I look forward to continuing to work closely with the Secretary General, the Chief of Staff and their civil and military colleagues, whose continued efforts will be required to ensure that the goals and objectives are met.

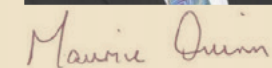

Paul Kehoe T.D.
Minister with Responsibility for Defence

Secretary General & Chief of Staff

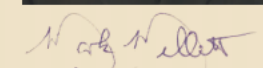

We welcome approval of this Strategy Statement which provides a strategic framework for the work of the Department of Defence and the Defence Forces over the next three years. The Department has a unique civil/military structure and responsibility for implementation of this Strategy Statement falls to both military and civil branches. Implementation will be overseen by the Strategic Management Committee on a continuous basis. This civil-military approach facilitates business planning processes in both the Department of Defence and the Defence Forces within a shared view of the strategic goals, objectives and actions identified in this Strategy Statement. The aim for the coming years is to ensure that the requirements of Government across all roles assigned can continue to be met.

Maurice Quinn
Secretary General

Mark Mellett-DSM
Vice Admiral
Chief of Staff

Introduction

This Strategy Statement encompasses the civil and military elements of the Department of Defence and the Defence Forces, and sets out a shared High Level Goal:

To provide for the military defence of the State, contribute to national and international peace and security and fulfil all other roles assigned by Government.

This High Level Goal comprises three broad Strategic Dimensions: Defence Policy; Ensuring the Capacity to Deliver; and Defence Forces Operational Outputs. Under each Strategic Dimension, a number of Strategic Goals are identified and flowing from these are the identified priority Objectives and Actions which will be pursued over the period 2017 to 2020.

In the development of this Strategy Statement, a meeting was held with the Joint Oireachtas Committee on Foreign Affairs and Trade, and Defence while the Defence Forces Representative Associations and staff throughout the Defence Organisation¹ were also consulted .

Mandate

The Constitution of Ireland vests the right to raise and maintain military or armed forces exclusively in the Oireachtas and expressly prohibits the raising and maintenance of any other military or armed force for any purpose whatsoever. It vests supreme command of the Defence Forces in the President and also provides that the exercise of such command shall be regulated by law. The governing legislation is contained in the Defence Acts 1954-2015, which provide that military command of, and all executive and administrative powers in relation to, the Defence Forces, including the power to delegate command and authority, shall be exercisable by the Government and through and by the Minister for Defence. By law, the Minister for Defence is also the head of the Department of Defence while the Secretary General is the “principal officer” of the Department and is also appointed by the Minister for Public Expenditure and Reform as the Accounting Officer for all defence expenditure. Defence Forces Headquarters (DFHQ) is the military element of the Department of Defence, which is headed by the Chief of Staff, who is the Minister’s principal military adviser.

In accordance with the Defence (Delegation of Ministerial Functions) Order 2017, the Government has delegated specified powers and duties of the Minister for Defence to the Minister of State at the Department of Defence, Paul Kehoe TD.

White Paper on Defence²

The White Paper on Defence, approved by Government in July 2015, provides the defence policy framework out to 2025. This policy framework, which provides that Ireland will continue to maintain its policy of military neutrality, is flexible and responsive given the dynamic nature of the security environment and enables the Defence Organisation to be adaptive to changing circumstances. As well as providing for the defence of the State from armed aggression, the roles assigned include continued provision of supports to An Garda Síochána, the defence contribution to international peace and security and the defence contribution to major emergencies and civil contingencies. A key feature of the White Paper is the geo-political and domestic security environment assessment³ which provided the basis for the defence policy response and other policy requirements that are set out and which, in turn, led to the consolidation of those requirements into revised roles for both the Permanent Defence Force and the Reserve Defence Force (RDF).

2. <http://www.defence.ie/WebSite.nsf/WP2015E>

The White Paper also sets out key principles on capability development, the future development of both the RDF and Civil Defence, and places a strong emphasis on development of the human resources of the Organisation. White Paper implementation is also addressed and, since publication, a total of 88 separate projects were identified to be completed over a ten year period, with a joint civil military White Paper Implementation Facilitation Team established to support and monitor the progress of these White Paper projects.

Programme for a Partnership Government 2016

In relation to Defence, the Programme for a Partnership Government agreed in May 2016 identified a total of 14 separate commitments, many of which overlap with extant White Paper projects and are reflected across the various Objectives and Actions that are identified in this Strategy Statement. Details of the 14 specific commitments contained in the Programme that have been assigned to Defence are contained in the Appendix, along with details of other commitments made in respect of which Defence has a contributory role.

Defence Funding

Defence funding is provided on an annual basis through two separate allocations: Vote 35 (Army Pensions) and Vote 36 (Defence).

The Army Pensions Vote provides for the payment of pension benefits to retired military personnel and certain dependants. As such, the Vote is non-discretionary and demand driven. Superannuation benefits – retirement pensions and once-off lump sums – account for over 95% of all military pensions expenditure. The balance is spent on military disability pensions and other ancillary benefits. The gross Vote 35 allocation for 2017 amounted to €229m while the Budget allocation for 2018 is €239m.

The Defence Vote provides for both capital and current expenditure and in 2017 the gross allocation amounted to a total of €692m with a Budget allocation of €707m provided for 2018. The White Paper on Defence 2015 provides the policy approach to investment, whilst the 2018-2021 Capital Spending Plan includes a Defence provision of €416m. The capital element of Vote 36 is used for the purchase and upgrade of military equipment, necessary building and maintenance works, and ICT projects.

Cross Cutting with other Departments and Agencies

There are important cross-departmental dimensions to the work of the Defence Organisation and meeting our Goals and Objectives is often critically dependent on the inputs and co-operation of other Departments and State Agencies. Equally, their success can be dependent on the inputs and co-operation of the Defence Organisation. Department officials and Defence Forces personnel are represented on a number of inter-departmental groups and committees which consider a range of cross-cutting issues that impact on Government. Some of these cross-cutting relationships are outlined below.

³ http://www.defence.ie/WebSite.nsf/WP_chap2

The White Paper reflects the importance of whole of Government approaches to the security of the State. In this context, the Department of Defence will continue to collaborate with a range of Departments and Agencies who have security responsibilities. Such engagement includes that under the auspices of Cabinet Committee F (National Security), the National Security Committee and the Government Task Force on Emergency Planning. Increased collaboration in terms of planning, capability awareness, and joint exercising contributes to a stronger and more comprehensive approach to mitigating security threats to the State.

The Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade is a key strategic partner with which the Defence Organisation will continue to have a close and effective working relationship in the areas of UN Peacekeeping; International Security Policy; Disarmament, Non-Proliferation and Arms Control; and Sustainable Development. The Defence Organisation will continue to contribute to the implementation of the relevant Sustainable Development Goals and targets, as set out in the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. The Defence Organisation will also continue to contribute to the inter-departmental groups focused on the implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 1325 through Ireland's second National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security.

The Defence Organisation has pioneered the use of MOUs and SLAs covering services delivered to a range of Government Departments and Agencies. These are defined and may include specific output targets for the Defence Forces. The Department will continue to develop this framework where appropriate.

The Office of Emergency Planning will continue to support the Minister for Defence in his role as Chairman of the Government Task Force on Emergency Planning and, where appropriate, will continue to provide assistance during national emergencies/crises to the lead Government Departments and participate in inter-agency structured exercises.

Whilst the Department of Communications, Climate Action and Environment has the lead role in relation to cyber security, the Defence Organisation is committed to participating in the delivery of measures to improve the cyber security of the State, as proposed in the Cyber Security Strategy for Ireland which was approved by Government in 2015.

In terms of procurement, the Defence Organisation continues to pursue the potential for enhanced future cooperation in joint procurement activities by the Defence Category Council, which operates under the auspices of the Office of Government Procurement, and which is chaired by the Department of Defence and also includes representation by personnel with responsibility for procurement from An Garda Síochána and the Irish Prison Service.

The Department of Defence will continue to work with the Office of the Attorney General to ensure that work is completed within a sound legal and constitutional framework. The Defence Organisation will further develop its positive relationship with the Office of the Ombudsman for the Defence Forces.

The Defence Organisation has a key role to play in the Decade of Centenaries Programme and will continue to work closely with the Department of Culture, Heritage and the Gaeltacht towards ensuring a successful commemorative programme, including input to state ceremonies and management of the Military Service (1916-1923) Pensions Collection project.

The Department of Defence will continue to support the engagement by Civil Defence with local authorities, and the continued provision of Civil Defence support, under the Framework for Major Emergency Management across a range of emergency incidents.

Partnership, Conciliation and Arbitration, and Veterans Policy

The Defence Organisation will continue to invest time and resources in partnership structures. Benefits include a greater shared understanding of the business of defence and how that can be progressed, better internal and external communications, the development of customer service planning and implementation, better environmental planning, and the creation of forums in which issues of concern can be resolved.

The Defence Forces Conciliation and Arbitration (C&A) Scheme, which will be subject to a review, provides a range of fora for defence management to discuss with the Defence Forces Representative Associations (RACO and PDFORRA), within the scope of representation, the impact of the implementation of this Strategy Statement. Although they do not come under the formal C&A Scheme, provision has been made for representation for members of the Reserve, by RDFRA. The Department also interacts with the Irish Nurses and Midwives Organisation which represents members of the Army Nursing Service.

The White Paper on Defence recognises the valued public service given by former servicemen and women of the Defence Forces. To this end, a range of initiatives have been identified for implementation to enhance supports available to veterans.

Human Rights and Equality Issues

Having regard to section 42(2) of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission Act 2014, the human rights and equality issues that are relevant to the performance of the functions of the Department of Defence have been considered in the preparation of this Strategy Statement.

Whilst the Defence Forces are not a public body for the purposes of the Act, the Department of Defence has a key role in the formulation of policy in relation to the Defence Forces, and in monitoring its implementation. The White Paper continues the development of this agenda. The approach to human rights and equality issues is being pursued through a number of initiatives. These include the development of a Diversity and Inclusion Strategy for the Defence Forces, an Equality Policy, and a number of new initiatives recently implemented with a view to increasing female participation in the Defence Forces.

Various measures are also in place to ensure the right of each individual, civil or military, to dignity in their work environment and in all activities arising from their service, whilst provisions also exist for dealing with internal complaints and the disclosure of information under the Protected Disclosures Act 2014.
